Program Notes for this evening's selections:

Grand Canyon Fanfare
James Newton Howard, arr. By Paul Murtha
James Newton Howard composed this dynamic fanfare for the closing segment of the 1993 movie "Grand Canyon." The film is now largely forgotten; however, the music remains a vibrant and powerful statement and a very effective concert opener.

Rhythm of the Winds
By Frank Erickson
Frank Erickson graduated from high school in Washington, where he played trumpet and wrote his first concert piece for band, The Fall of Evening. During World War II, he arranged for army bands, and following the war, he worked as a dance band arranger while studying composition. Rhythm of the Winds is a popular standard in the wind band repertoire. It is a bright, energetic work, displaying many of the compositional techniques unique to Frank Erickson's works.

O Magnum Mysterium
By Mortem Lauridsen, arranged by H. Robert Reynolds
This fine arrangement brings Morton Lauridsen's reverent masterwork to the concert band stage. Many will know this stunning work from the magnificent choral rendition that has become a staple of the choral repertoire.

Puszta* – Four Gypsy Dances
By Jan Van der Roost
This suite of four gypsy dances was written in 1987. While having the definite sound of authentic folk dances, the themes and melodies are all original. The dances alternate from bright and colorful to tranquil and melancholic, moods typical of gypsy music. Lying to the south and east of the Danube, the Puszta is the great Hungarian plain or prairie country that was home to nomadic shepherds and fierce horsemen. The region is noted as the home of the celebrated Lipizzaner stallion.

The Hounds of Spring
By Alfred Reed
Alfred Reed's three-part overture, written in 1980, interprets the exuberance of youth with a brilliant and driving opening section. The lyric and melodic middle section conveys the sweetness of tender love. A fugue-like conclusion has the rhythmic energy that introduced the composition and combines the two themes introduced earlier.

Days of Glory
By John Cacavas
"Days of Glory" was composed in 1963 for the Baldwin-Wallace College Symphonic Band. Though it does not borrow material from a real source, Cacavas's march is an attempt to capture the spirit of the heroic marching songs of the Revolutionary War. These tunes were based on folk songs, bugle calls, and drum cadences of the era. Usually playing as a prelude to battle, the Revolutionary band was often not more than a fife and drum.

The King & I* Symphonic Highlights
By Rogers & Hammerstein, arr. By Steven Bulla
Opening on Broadway in 1951, few musicals can boast as many lasting and memorable songs as this Rodgers and Hammerstein masterpiece. Drawing on the classic orchestrations by Robert Russell Bennett, here is a fabulous medley for the symphonic stage. Includes: Something Wonderful; I Whistle a Happy Tune; I Have Dreamed; The March of the Siamese Children; Getting to Know You and Shall We Dance?

Colonel Bogey March
By Kenneth Alford
Alford's tuneful "walking march" is known to many from the soldiers who whistled it in the movie
